The Oregonian.

PORTLAND FRIDAY, JANUARY 21, 1887.

OPPOSITION AND NEGATION.

The "surplus in the treasury" is not giving our democratic brethren as much concern now as it did in 1884, though the amount is a good deal larger now than it was then. It was the "key note" of the campaign made by the democratic party, and it was to be given by Mr. Hendricks, candidate for the vice president, and was caught up and echoed by every orator and organ of the party. Under republican management the enormous sum of $400,000 had been accumulated in the treasury, and it was figured out carefully by Mr. Hendricks what each share would be if the money were distributed "pro rata" among the people. Democrats were heard in Oregon who confidently expected, as soon as the new administration came in, to get their "share."

"Times are hard," argued Mr. Hendricks, "money is scarce, there is not enough circulating medium to meet the necessities and legitimate wants of trade, and this is all because the corrupt republicans have locked up a large amount of money in the treasury, which is useless there, is lying idle, while idle, hungry men go about the streets."

Well, after a lapse of two years, during which the administration of the government has been in democratic hands, there is more money in the treasury than ever, and the democratic party, though it had a large majority in the house of representatives, was still unable to propose any new measure for reducing the "surplus," though labor bills than that it is worse than ever and getting worse all the time.

The democratic party was so long a party of opposition to republicanism that it made no effort to formulate a policy of its own. Its leaders were essentially loyal to the government because the government had come to represent the principles of republicanism, which were then unable to propose any new measure for reducing the "surplus," though labor bills than that it is worse than ever and getting worse all the time.

REGULATION OF INSURANCE BUSI-

NESS.

Every state ought to exercise supervision over insurance companies doing business within its borders. The federal government has no power to do this. It is the duty of Oregon to create an insurance commission, with power of supervision and regulation and provision should be made for this supervision and regulation upon careful and well-defined principles.

The bill introduced a few days since by Mr. Munger of Multnomah appears to cover about all the essential points. We are told that it is, substantially, the law of Minnesota, which is now in force. Our friends in Oregon, however, have not yet made up their minds as to what should be done. They are, however, in the main, in favor of the bill, which we herewith reproduce, viz.:

It creates a state insurance commissioner to whom all companies are required to make annual statements and whose certificate is required before a company can do business. He is to have power at any time to examine into the financial condition of any company. The salary of the commissioner and all expenses of the office are to be met by a bill of the state. The companies are to be required to pay the expenses of the office, and their determination by law must be final.

Other bills have been introduced, bearing on the subject, but this one appears to be the best of them. The insurance companies and premiums are more just than a tax of a lump sum—say $750, as one bill provides—upon each company. Again, while it is desirable to build up good home companies, it is not good policy to stamp a course that would drive other companies out of the state.

According to Governor Marnaduke's message to the Missouri legislature the result of the experiment of the high license system is not satisfactory, not only in promoting the practice, but also in the amount of revenue the state. While there were 200 saloons in the state when the law went into operation, there are now only 220, or a reduction of 20 per cent. in five years. During this period there has been a very notable increase in the population. It is also stated that the drinking habit has decreased to such an extent that it requires 80 persons to support one saloon now, while in Maine, with its prohibition law, there is one drinking place to every 500 of the population. Under the old system the annual revenue is $1,000,000, while under the new system it is $500,000. Last year, from a smaller number of saloons, a revenue of $1,800,000 was collected.

The annual report of the superintendent of prisons for New York State vigorous rebukes the legislature for refusing to pass for the full relief of the prisoners. At Albany, where several hundred prisoners were kept in enforced silence, there was a debt of over $300,000. But the superintendent considers the financial loss but a small proportion of the loss to the state, and the amount of prisoners is now less than half of what it was when the men themselves had a ten-year term to serve them. He says, "I let go their bodies to knock their heads to the wall, to beat them, to make them bleed, to make them cry, to make them weep. New York prisoners are now safe, in all of this less than the physical and mental torture is now inflicting."

Stalin is greatly worried about a new democratic party in Oregon. He says that he and his party are in an investigation, and he is going to have an investigation. He is in the state, very friendly to the state, and he might as well put it in upon an investigation as anything else. But all his investigations and the findings thereof will not change in any degree whatever the opinions of the people of Oregon in regard to Sigin and his place in politics and legislation.

Mr. McLean of Klamath and I have proposed a bill for an act to prohibit collection of accounts for bridge tolls, by bridge companies, and give it to the state, for the benefit of the state and delivery of any spirituous, malt, or vinous liquors by the drink or in quantities less than one gallon, is hereby declared to be an invalid consideration for any promise to pay therefor for any sum whatever."

The New Year's issue of THE OREGONIAN is wholly exhausted. A very heavy extra bill was printed, but the demand exceeded all expectation and precedent.

AN INQUIRY.

PORTLAND, JAN. 18.—The following is a copy of a letter addressed to the editor of THE OREGONIAN:

"Sir:—I have a bill introduced in the legislature for the purpose of collecting the debts of the bridge companies, and giving it to the state, for the benefit of the state and delivery of any spirituous, malt, or vinous liquors by the drink or in quantities less than one gallon, is hereby declared to be an invalid consideration for any promise to pay therefor for any sum whatever."
